

Introduction to Inspiration ads

Inspiration ads are flexible merchandising solutions that spark out-of-aisle discovery. This helps you reach consumers with a curated experience at a moment that might not be possible with products alone. Designed for long-term brand equity impact, Inspiration Ads drive impressions and connect you with new consumers.

Find Inspiration ads under the Reach and Build your own objectives. Learn more about campaign objectives.

Inspiration ads include recipe ad formats. The recipe ad format consists of—

- Sponsored ingredients: Ingredients owned by your brand. Your ad group-sponsored products are the same sponsored ingredients from the Recipe page. We allow up to 40 sponsored ingredients in one Recipe. The recipe determines the order in which the sponsored UPCs appear in the ad.
- Non-sponsored ingredients: Ingredients that are part of the recipe, but are not in your brand portfolio. Instacart dynamically chooses these exact UPCs.
- Images and videos: You can upload creative assets you want to feature in your Recipe ad.
- Recipe page: When a consumer clicks on your recipe ad, it will take them to the Recipe page you built. This page houses the recipe information, shoppable ingredients, cooking instructions, nutritional information, etc. Learn more about Recipe pages.

Auction

Instacart Ads uses a first-price auction model to determine which ads customers see. Minimum bids start at a $15 CPM. Enter the bid amount you're willing to pay for 1,000 impressions when placing your CPM bid amount. We use the CPM bid, ad quality signals, and additional metadata to decide which ad wins the auction, and thus the placement. CPM bids are placed at the ad group level so all keywords within one ad group have 1 CPM bid. You must set a CPM bid before setting any additional parameters.

Why can't I see my ad?

Your ad won't appear every time you search for it given the nature of a dynamic auction. This could be because—

- The budget is insufficient.
- Other ads are competing for the same keywords.
- Your search doesn't meet the targeting criteria.

To confirm your ad serves to customers, look at your impressions and clicks metrics. If you don't see any impressions or clicks then it could be because—

- The bid isn't competitive enough.
- There's low UPC availability.

Targeting ads

Inspiration ads built for Reach objectives default to target by behavior. Inspiration ads built under the Build your own objective can target by keywords or behavior. You can only select 1 type of targeting lever per ad group. Create multiple ad groups to apply multiple targeting levers.

Keyword targeting

Keyword-targeted ad groups show on the search results page across websites and apps where we serve ads. Keyword targeting lets you engage consumers when they search for relevant, complementary, adjacent, or replacement products.

You can add any or all suggested keywords to improve the odds a customer sees your recipe. There's no limit on keywords in an ad group. You can add keywords to existing ad groups and new ad groups.

To make sure consumers have a positive, cohesive shopping experience on Instacart, all keyword targeting is subject to Instacart approval. Instacart has 3 match types available to use for inspiration keyword targeting: exact-match, narrow-match, and broad-match. Most approved keyword targeting is clearly relevant, complementary, or adjacent to the category or product for which a consumer is searching. Other conditions may apply to keyword targeting based on Instacart's discretion. If your ad group is not eligible to serve on a specific keyword, the ad group review page displays the text "Irrelevant targeting" next to that keyword. Your ad won't serve on that specific keyword, but it serves on other approved keywords you provided.

Behavioral targeting

Behavioral targeting lets you reach consumers on Instacart based on past behavior and supports reaching desired target audiences (ex. re-engage lapsed consumers, reach category purchasers new to your brand). If the user meets the targeting criteria, behaviorally targeted ad groups surface on the search results page, storefront, and collections.

You can select Build your own behaviors to create a narrow or broad audience or Behavior shortcuts to choose from a list of common audiences.

Build your own behaviors

If you opt to build your own behaviors, the default relationship is Customers who match all of the following which prompts AND conditions to hone in on your target consumer. Instacart Ads Manager no longer supports OR conditions in 1 ad group. You can create separate ad groups if you want to target multiple audience segments.

Targeting option	How it works	When to use
New to Instacart	Target consumers new to shopping on Instacart (ex. the customer placed 0-5 orders over all time). This behavior is brand-agnostic, so it's not the same as New to brand.	If you want to target potential consumers higher in the funnel and beat your competitors at check out

Interactions	Target consumers who interacted with brands, products, or categories (ex. searched for, viewed an item detail page, or added to cart). This behavior is purchase-agnostic	If you want to target consumers at the edge of conversion or interacted with your brand, product, or category
Purchase behaviors	Target consumers who have or haven't purchased specific brands, products, or categories.	If you want to target based on specific audience preferences and reach existing, new, or lapsed consumers

Lookback Windows

Ads Manager only records conversions for users who previously saw or clicked on an ad within a specified period, called a lookback window. They can be 30-, 60-, 90-, 120-, 150-, or 180-day windows. Lookback days are "fixed," so you must select all that apply to your behavioral targeting, as they don't overlap.

Behavior shortcuts

Shortcuts take the work out of targeting setup so you can launch campaigns faster. Ads Manager uses preset conditions for the most common audience strategies. If you opt for behavior shortcuts, choose an audience from the dropdown and see rules stitched together for you, ready for your inputs. The shortcuts stitch together the most common behavioral targeting rule combinations. Select a shortcut and make it your own by filling in the category, brand, or product fields as applicable.

Targeting shortcut	When to use
New to Instacart	Target any customer adding to their first few carts.
New to category or brand	Reach customers who never purchased from your brand or chosen categories.
Buys X category, not my brand	Get your brand in front of new customers buying similar items from competitors.
Interacts but doesn't buy	Target new customers who search for or click on your brand or chosen categories.
Buys my brands, excluding specific UPCs	Cross-promote other items the customer might like.
Lapsed buyers	Re-engage customers who haven't purchased your brand in X days.

Loyal buyers	Encourage repeat purchases by customers from the past X days.
--------------	---

Choosing a shortcut prepopulates targeting rules, where you can input specific categories, brands, or products and adjust lookback windows as needed. Like keyword targeting, all campaign targeting is subject to Instacart approval and ad policy guidelines. Your campaign's audience takes into account your targeting parameters, as well as relevancy optimization within Instacart's algorithm. All ad serving occurs at Instacart's discretion.